Privacy Policy

INTRODUCTION AND PURPOSE

Schoenstatt Australia is committed to protecting your privacy and ensuring the security of your personal information. This Privacy Policy explains how we collect, use, store, and protect your data when you interact with our services. Our goal is to be transparent about our practices and to provide you with the information you need to make informed decisions. By using our services, you agree to the terms outlined in this policy.

OUR PRINCIPLES

Schoenstatt Australia operates in a manner that reflects the principles of the Code of Conduct policy:

- A profound respect for the individuality of all in our care.
- An education and formation tradition based on love rather than power and control and which meets our legal rights and obligations in regard to privacy and confidentiality, by ensuring compliance with the provisions of relevant privacy legislation.

OUR COMMITMENT

We will ensure that only such information as is necessary for the members, administration, employment and business purposes is collected and that such information will only be accessible by persons who are specifically authorised to access the information.

We will pay specific attention to the following:

- The necessity of personal information to be collected and the means of collection of this information
- The use or disclosure of personal information about an individual
- Ensuring that information held is accurate, complete and up to date
- The protection of information from misuse, loss and unauthorised access, modification or disclosure.

FURTHER INFORMATION

Further information about this document can be sought from the Board of Trustees of Schoenstatt Australia.
